Elon-e-Trillion Musk Wins Tesla Shareholder Nod for Historic Payday

Elon Musk responded in kind to Tesla investors approving his $1 trillion compensation package, making a series of extravagant predictions about what the company will accomplish in the years to come.

Musk's humanoid robot will progress from simple tasks, like handing out bags of candy to perform surgery with "beyond human" levels of precision, the chief executive officer said Thursday.

The flagging car business — headed for a second year of shrinkage with "beyond human" levels of precision, the chief executive officer said Thursday.

The vote was pivotal because Musk had suggested he would step down or spend more time with his other companies if he didn't get greater control over the company. Tesla shares were little changed at $250 a share Friday in New York, before the start of regular trading. The stock is up 10% this year, trailing the 14% advance in the S&P 500 index.

Musk, who has led the EV maker since 2008, did not cast an ash in the past that Tesla will be constrained by the supply chain if it relies on produce complex products. To that end, he said the company might end up building a chip factory to supplement the semiconductor it ordered from established manufacturers including Samsung Electronics Co. and Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Co.

China's Oct Exports to US Fall Over 25% On Levy Stress
Worry Lines Supplies to other nations rise 3.1% on-year; overall shipments drop 1.1%

China's exports unexpectedly contracted in October as global demand failed to offset the deepening slump in shipments to the US, leading a slow to an economy already slowing amid sluggish consumer spending and investment at home.

Exports fell for the first time in eight months, dropping 13% from a year earlier according to official data released on Friday. China sends to all nations except the US rose 3.1%, not enough to compensate for the more than 25% decline to America.

"If the strength in exports cannot be sustained, China's growth could face a triple whammy" from the prolonged contraction in the property sector, and weak local private consumption and exports," Barclays economists including Yinglu Zhou said in a note.

Chinese export to have been resilient until now as other destinations made up for drops in shipments across the Pacific Ocean. Sales abroad had grown every month since February when activity slowed because of the Lunar New Year holiday.

But October marked a break in the trend of growth driven by the pursuit of new markets among Chinese companies. A range of trade indicators soared to cool off from the record numbers set in earlier months, with Shanghai port processing the fewest containers since April.

"The decline in overall exports in October came as a surprise to almost all forecasters, with the median estimate of those polled by Bloomberg at 2.0%. Only a single analyst in the survey had predicted a decline."

Barclays with the US over trade escalated last month, before a deal reached later in October by President Donald Trump and Vice President Kamala Harris in talks in South Korea.

With the US reducing tariffs on Chinese goods by 10% from next Monday, it's possible trade between the world's largest economies could see a pickup through the year-end. The tariff may prove limited, however, because duties on Chinese goods are still higher than those on products from countries such as Vietnam.

And if the slowdown in demand from the rest of the globe continues, that could pull down shipments and the broader economy in the final two months of the year. Already last quarter China's economic growth decelerated to the weakest pace in a year even as exports boomed.

It risks an even steeper slide-down in the months ahead. Analysts forecast the weakest growth this quarter since the final three months of 2022, when the nation was reeling the end of debilitating Covid-19 lockdowns.

The weakness looked to herald in October when shipments to the European Union declined 1% the slowest growth since a dip in February. Exports to some other major markets fell, with sales to South Korea, Russia and Canada all dropping by double digits.

Crypto Bears Play for a Month, Eat Away Almost Entire '25 Gains

Currency down over 20% from Oct 6 peak valuation of $4.4 T

IN A BIT OF A BOTHER
Bitcoin dropped below its 200-DMA, a closely watched support level that has held since the 2022 bear market

It took just over a month for cryptocurrencies to erase almost all of this year's market value gains.

As of Oct 6 peak, the total market value of cryptocurrencies reached a record of nearly $4.4 trillion, but a 20% decline since then leaves asset close up a modest 2.5% for the year, according to CoinGecko data. The downturn began with the beginning liquidation of about $100 billion in leveraged positions just days after the all-time high shattered confidence, and traders show few signs of betting on a rebound.

That performance is a shock few would have predicted in a year defined by a lighter embrace of digital assets by regulators, global banks and institutional investors.

President Donald Trump's push to reseat the US as the world's crypto epicenter unleashed a wave of activity and sent Bitcoin climbing as much as 35%. In a sign of how quickly sentiment has reversed, the market value of digital assets is now lower than when Trump took office.

around, the sharpest losses have been concentrated in altcoins—smaller, more volatile tokens—which have experienced significant volatility this year.

"Excluding Bitcoin and Ether, crypto has largely been trading on the backfoot for months," said Augustine Fan, a partner at SignalPlus. "There's been little new money flowing into altcoins or DeFi projects."

With few near-term catalysts and persistent concerns over security and regulation, mainstream participation is likely to remain in check, Fan added.

Despite the gloom, there are some signs of stabilization. After six consecutive days of net outflows, US spot Bitcoin and Ether ETFs saw $250 million in inflows on Thursday, Bloomberg legal nuclear activities are in line with Pakistan's nuclear test to control around decades of strategic, export control violations, security partnerships, AQ Khan network and further proliferation. It has also warned against the creation of the international community to these aspects of Pakistan's nuclear test, the spokesperson said.

Trump's comments on a possible India visit could end on a possible change in this as of now, any information will be shared when available.

The spokesperson, however, said that India has taken over the US President's earlier comments about nuclear weapons testing by Pakistan. In an interview to CNN, Trump had named Pakistan along with Russia and China among the countries that had been testing nuclear weapons, Bloomberg
